Access to Deceased Service User Records

Please read the following information carefully:

The Access to Health Records Act 1990 grants rights to certain individuals to see what has been written about a deceased service user in a health record. This only applies to records made on or after 1st November 1991.

What is a Health Record?

These are records which have:

- Information relating to the physical or mental health or condition of an individual and
- Has been made by or on behalf of a health professional in connection with the care of that individual.

Who can have access?

Access may be given to the deceased service user's 'personal representative' (defined as being the legal representative granted by the Probate Office or Court) or to any other person who may have a claim following the service user's death.

In the case of a claim arising from the service user's death, we will only supply copies of records in relation to that claim. This is in accordance with the Access to Health Records Act 1990.

You will need to send documentation supporting your claim for access to the service user's records.

If the request is from the service user's personal representative, we will normally supply copies of health records which relate to recent treatment.

Are there any restrictions on access?

Yes, sometimes access may be denied if giving the information to the service user would be:

- Likely to cause serious harm to a person's physical or mental health or condition.
- If access would identify someone else not involved in the service user's care
- If it is considered that the service user would not have wished disclosure.

Is there a charge for access?

No, there is no charge.

In exceptional cases, the Trust may ask you to contribute to the cost of printing or supplying additional copies of your records.

How do I access the records?

You will need to provide two forms of identification which should be a copy of:

- Passport photograph page or
- Driving licence with photograph and
- Recent utility bill

Please send copies of the original documents only

The application form, along with copies of your identification should be sent to:
